

Give someone a start

A job for a parent is a working future for the whole family

We're working really closely with a group of parents returning to work who are a great fit for service-based roles in the retail, hospitality and call centre sectors. We can connect you with these job seekers and support you with a package of wrap-around services.

We have job seekers who are right for your industry

There's a range of things that make a parent returning to work a really good fit for your workplace.

Our job seekers:

- often have previous work experience in service-based roles
- have transferrable skills like cash handling and food preparation
- are flexible and motivated
- have tailored support from us once they're in work, including help with things like transport and childcare.

"It's great for my boys to see me working."

More support, less hassle

Get in touch with us about hiring a parent and we'll provide you with a dedicated contact person who will:

- get to know your business and what you're looking for
- talk to you about industry-specific training we might be able to help with
- work with you on a recruitment process
- find suitable candidates and manage the recruitment process
- arrange subsidies for eligible job seekers
- support you and your new employee.
